

April 10, 2020

Dear Families,

Lexington City Schools is committed to providing at-home learning experiences for our K-8 students through the end of the current school year. As a result, we have created an at-home learning page on our division website at www.lexedu.org to ensure the access to quality, aligned learning resources for all students.

The Lexington City Schools At-Home Learning Page connects students and parents/guardians with grade level and content area folders containing instructional plans, resources, and materials for at-home learning. Teachers have created two-week learning plans for the following dates: April 13-24, April 27-May 8, and May 11-22. Elementary teachers have added bi-weekly learning plans and resources to their grade level folders. Folders for most middle school teachers will include directions for students to use Google Classroom for their learning plans and resources.

At-home learning is not the same as “homeschooling” and does not replace the instruction that typically takes place during a school day. On the following pages, you will find a suggested schedule to follow at home, as well as tips for families while learning at home. Keep in mind that elementary students’ at-home learning activities should not exceed two hours per day and middle school students’ at-home learning activities should not exceed three hours per day. Students can work on activities at a pace and time that works best for your family.

Students and parents/guardians may email teachers, counselors, and administrators for educational assistance at any time. Teachers and staff have committed to reaching out to connect with students and families throughout this unprecedented time of school closure. Please also check the division website, your email, and our Lexington City Schools Facebook page for updates and announcements.

We appreciate your support to help us ensure that learning continues for your child during the time we are away from school. Working together, we can make sure your child is ready for a successful new school year in August. Thank you, as always, for your continued support.

Sincerely,

Rebecca J. Walters
Division Superintendent
